

ARCHITROPISM

ARCHITROPISM is a field of effects, where circulation and program emerge organically, where architecture is not static but dynamic, moving with the earth, the sun, the wind and human life; enabling its users to interact with the fourth dimension of time. This is an architecture that responds to nature and moves in time creating energy and experiences blurring the rift between our origins in the trees and our future in an urban society that moves in harmony with the natural world.
