

THE FLOWERS OF NEW LIFE

Concept collage

Maru Village in the Yasawa Archipelago (Fiji) is a corner of authentic culture surrounded by unspoiled nature.

Local flavor is evident in the traditional coconut leaf and bamboo huts, community life, handicrafts, meke dances and hospitality of the inhabitants, whose daily lives are closely linked to the ocean and the land.

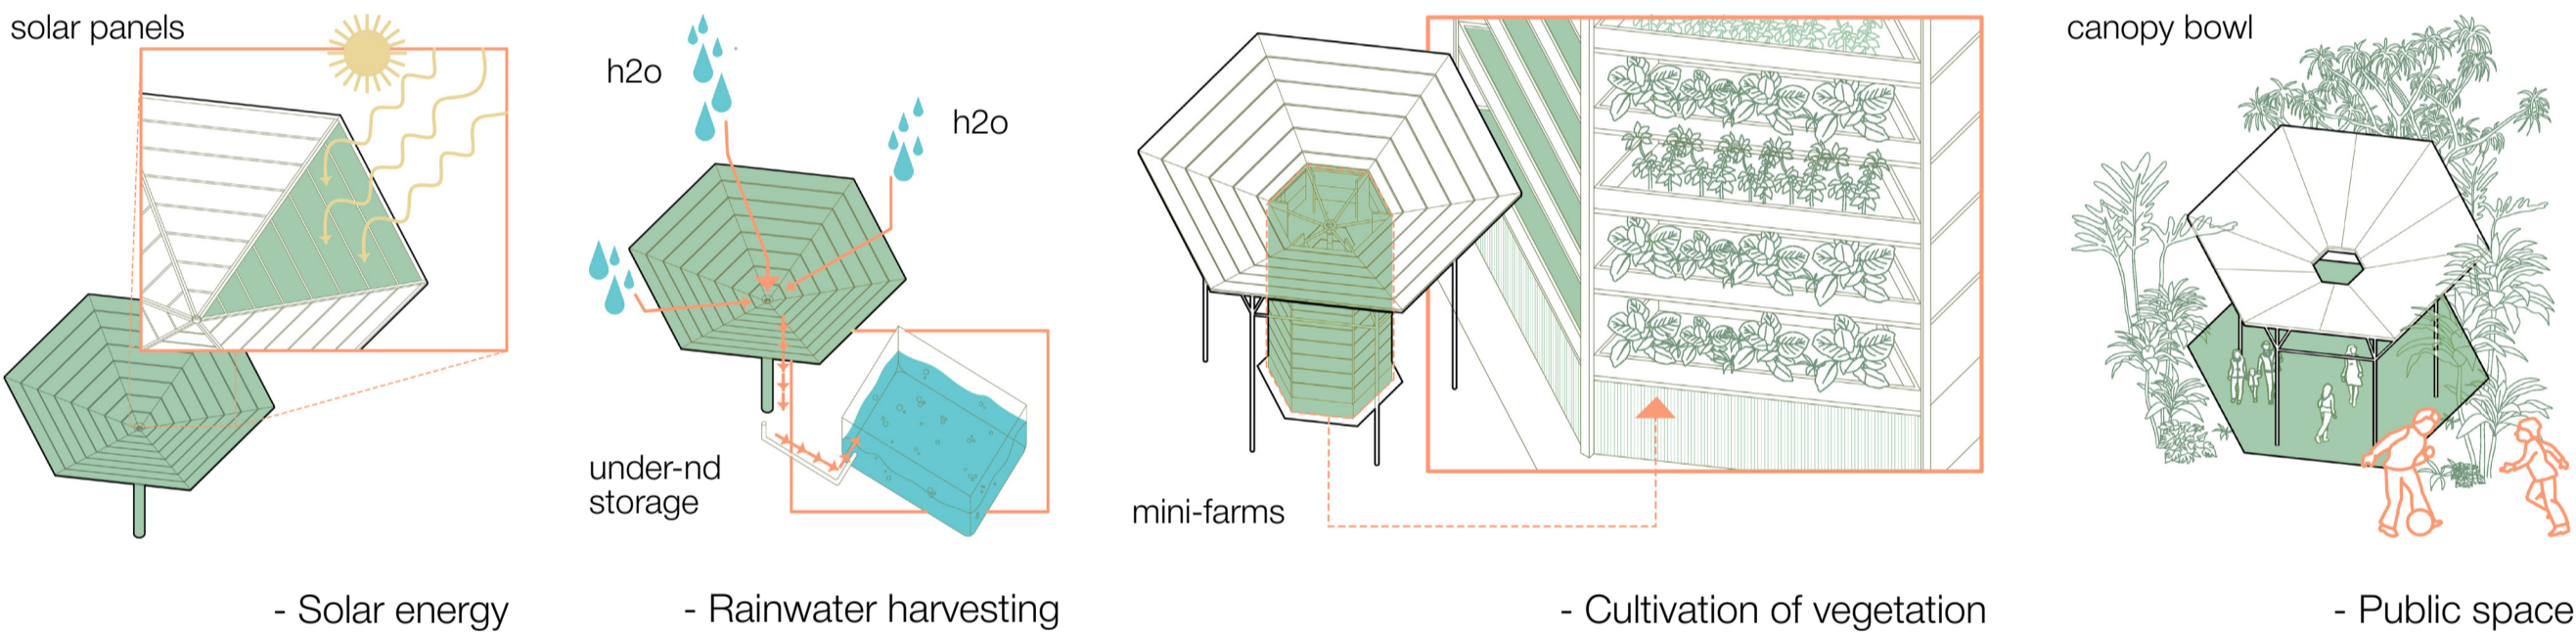

The architecture of modern technological buildings reflects this heritage through organic forms that mimic the curves of huts and hills, using natural materials.

In summary, our idea is to create a variety of hexagonal-shaped modular installations, each with its own set of special functions. Their architectural image reflects local color, nature and fits perfectly into the landscape.

These technological bowls are like large flowers from the future, they generate energy through solar panels, collect rainwater and create unique public spaces with a variety of canopies.

Technologies

Vegetation

Masterplan

