

A Glimpse of the Nexus: Aerial perspective of the site

Where village meets the Meke Nexus: Southern entrance

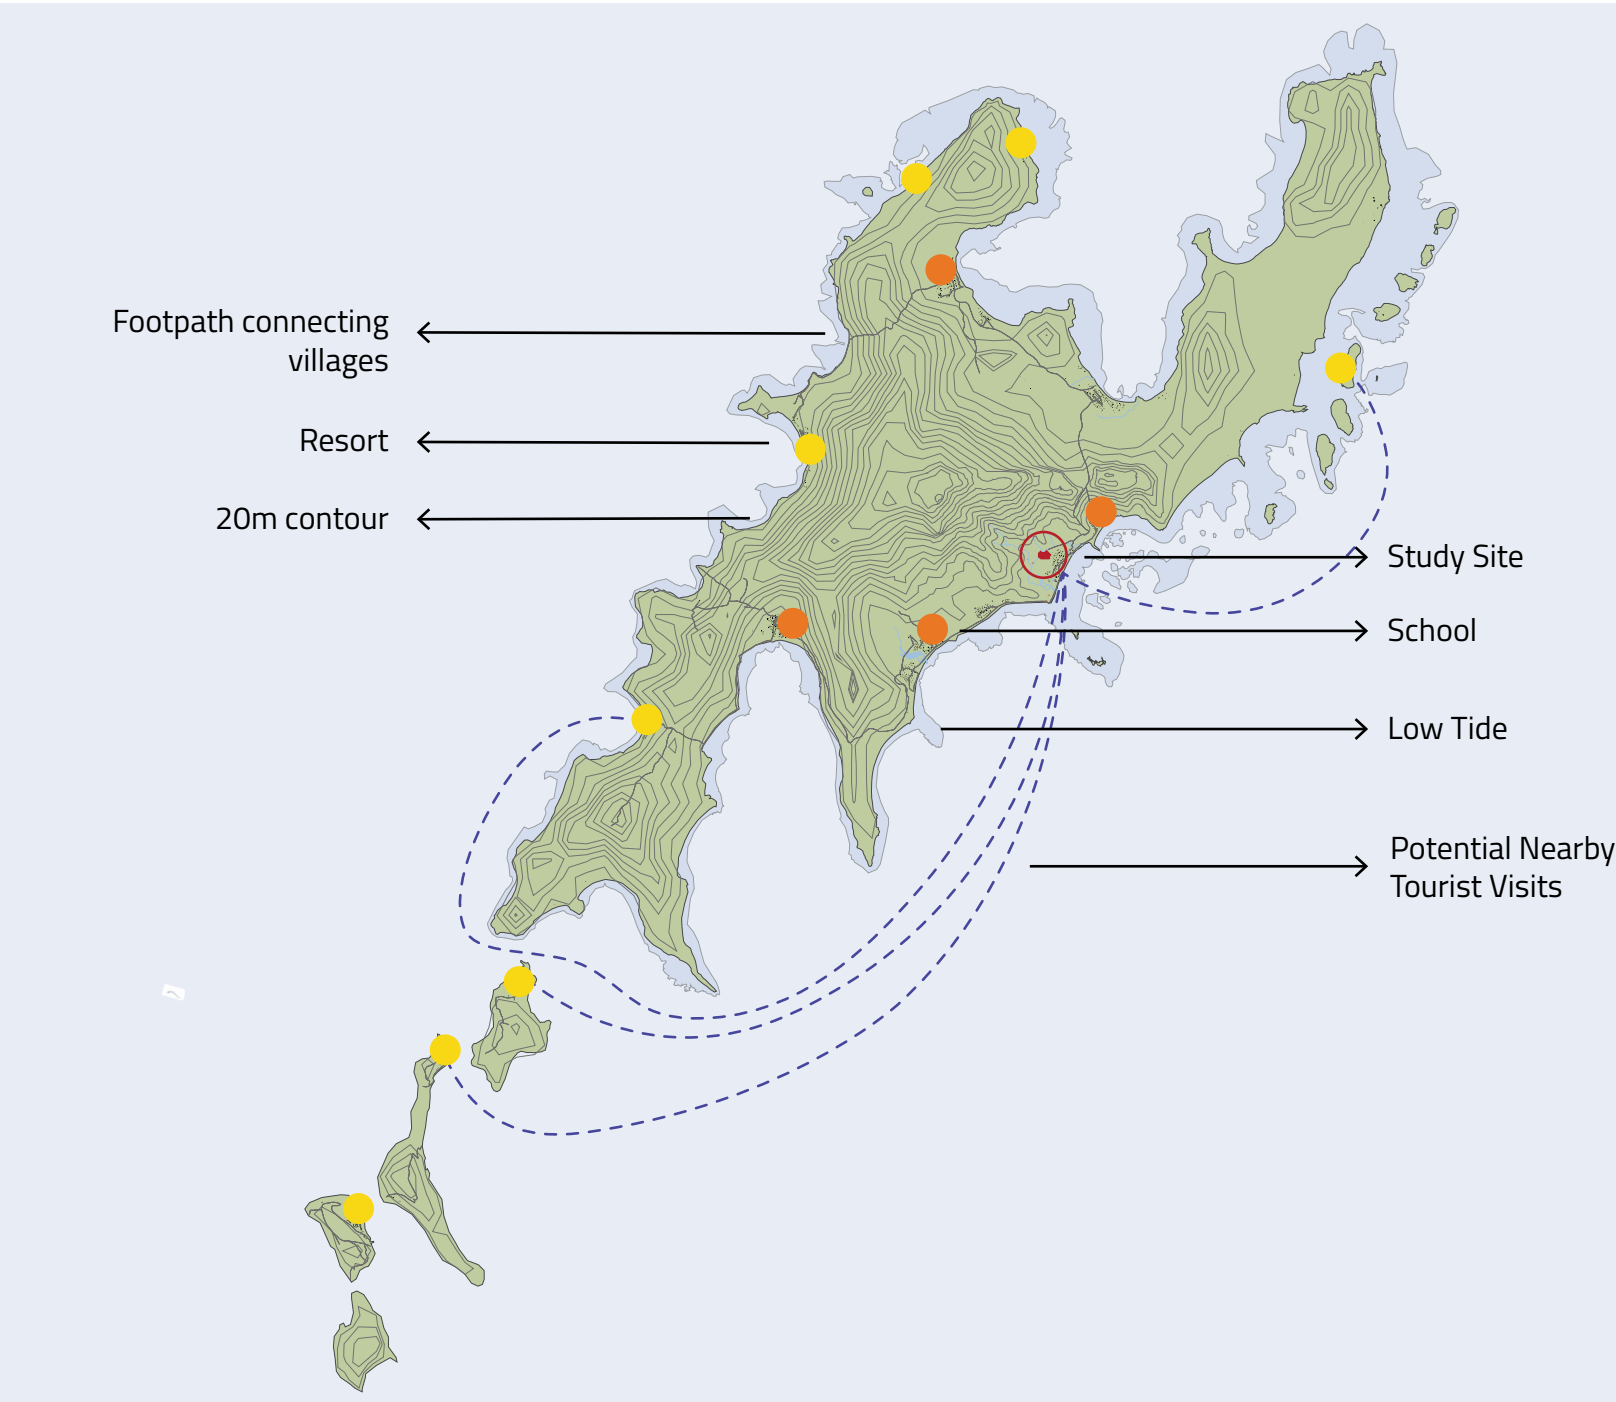

Meke Nexus

«Dance is the glue that binds the community»

Meke Nexus draws inspiration from the Fijian meke dance, embodying its fluid movements in the design of solar and rainwater harvesting structures that provide sustainable resources for the community. The name ‘Nexus’ reflects the intersection of culture, nature, and technology in the site to create a space of connection and vitality. Built with local, low-cost materials, the site also features native plants for timber, food, medicine, and fiber, which support traditional practices. With spaces for community, farming, play, and cultural learning, Meke Nexus fosters connection, economic opportunities, and a celebration of Marou’s heritage.
