The entire site is adaptive to various sizes and types of programming. Regardless, there is an emphasis on collective participation, with groups moving to each cocoon and taking responsibility for various necessities—water, power, or shelter. Through this rotation, individuals practice Burning Man ethos and are immersed in the landscape.

Scalable

Water filtration focuses on perennial lakes, old water infrastructure, using microfiltration and wetland filtration to generate potable water.

Solar dispersed throughout site. Geothermal focused around geyser.
