

The cabins' configuration is studied in such a way to be able to integrate the shelter function with other possible infrastructural systems. Gabion walls foundations and ground floor can host light hydroponics processes providing food to people on site, while the flat roof is capable of accommodating solar systems for collecting energy and plants for water collection and storage.

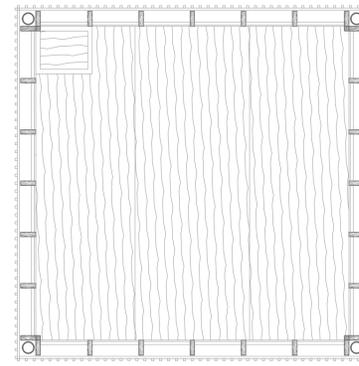

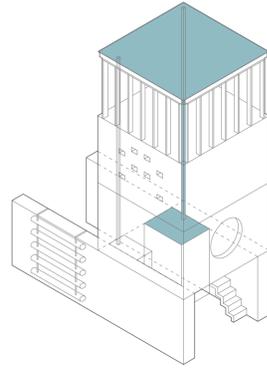

Food system integration

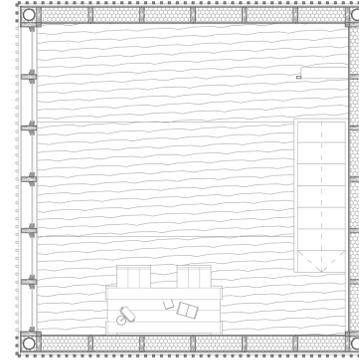

Solar energy collection system integration

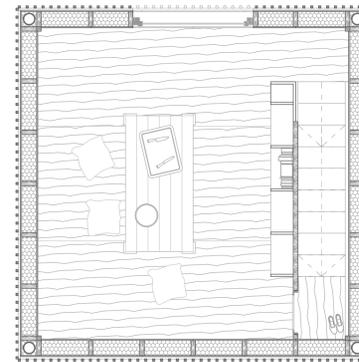

Water collection system integration

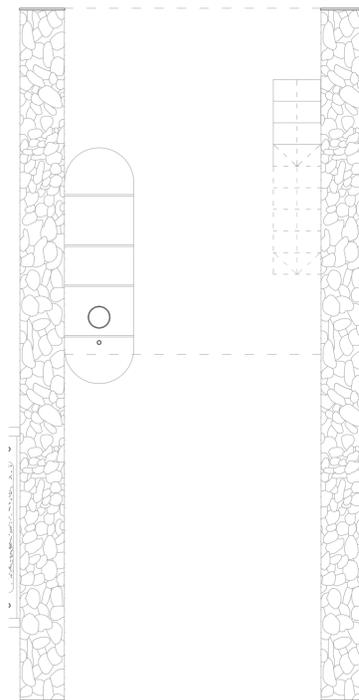

3rd "open" floor, plan

2nd floor, plan

1st floor, plan

Ground floor, plan

Railway opening

Enjoying the scenery while taking a break during a natural walks excursion

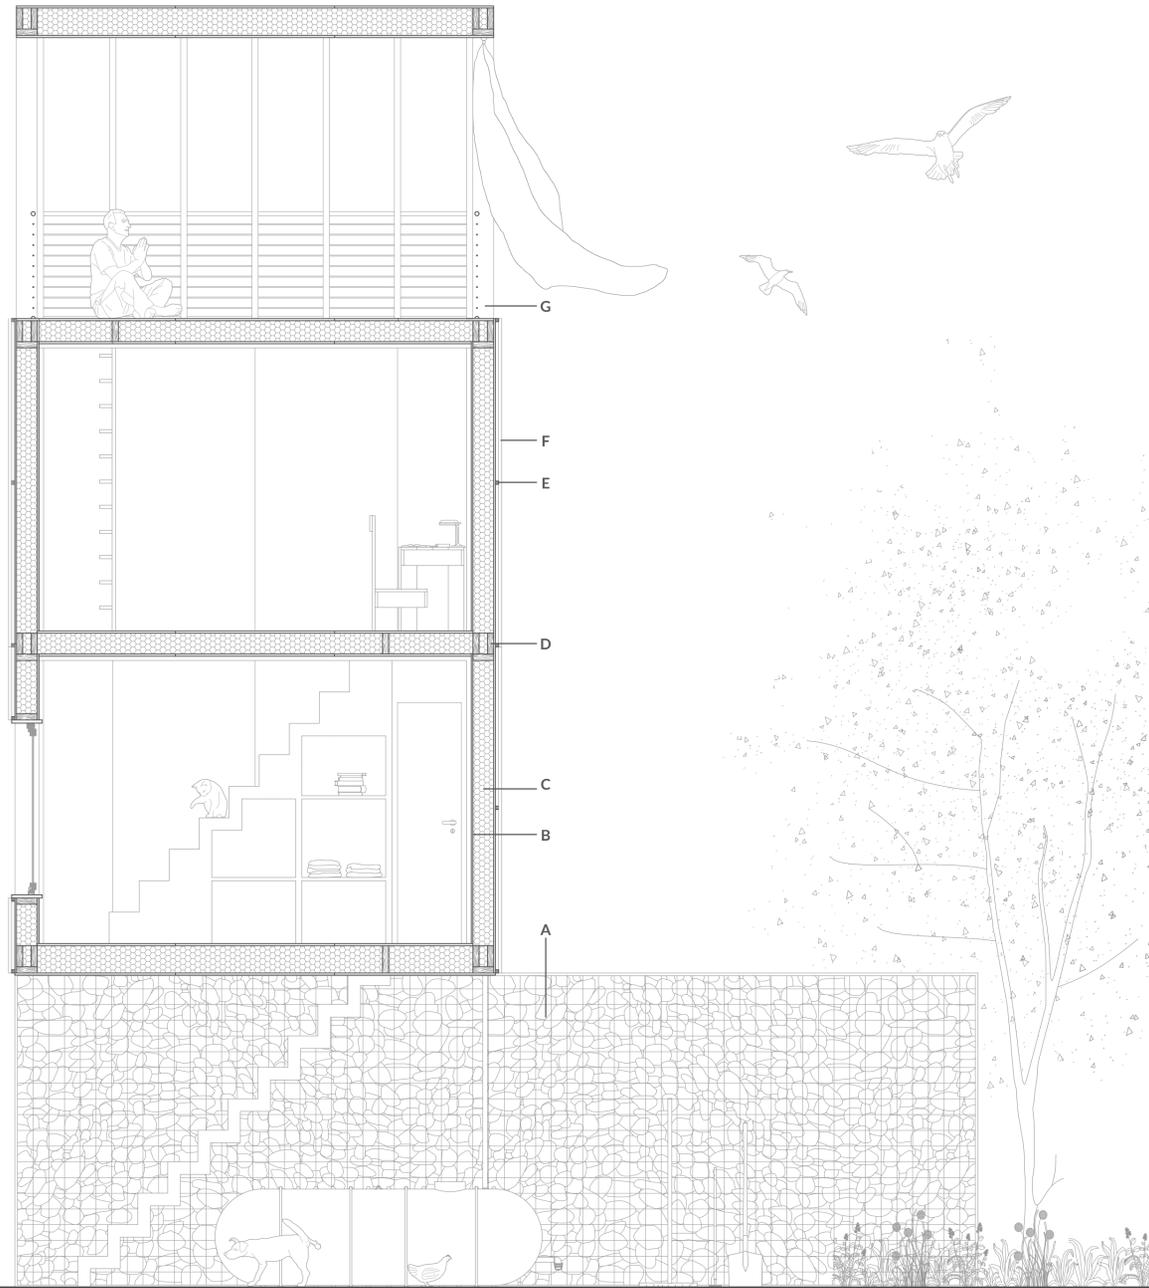

Lens opening

Little moments of relax during temporary residencies experiences

Rollpaper opening

Expressive and meditative opportunities during artistic venues and art installations

A - Gabion walls; B - Wood panels; C - Insulation: straw fibers; D - Platform frame, horizontal beams; E - Cladding support structure; F - Cladding: weathered wood lists; G - Platform frame, vertical pillars

